TARA STRAND

January, June, August, October, November

Far from the early days when she'd get called things like "Riddler Girl," Tara has the distinction of being one of the first—if not the first—Harley Quinn cosplayers out there, and of co-founding one of the earliest Batman cosplay groups, Gotham Public Works. A California native who started out working as a graphic and display artist, Tara's been enjoying a growing career as an actress and performer as well. With experience as a mime, dancer, clown, sideshow artist, magician's assistant, atmosphere performer, and so on, it seems that she's always had some form of inner Harley that wants to come out and play.

Along with keeping busy with a variety of things, Tara enjoys outdoorsy stuff, old stuff, spooky stuff, pretty stuff, hilarious stuff, bad ass stuff, and so on. She is currently expecting her first child along with her husband and long-time Joker counterpart, Donald Strand, and they're looking forward to family stuff.

LAURA MAGNUSSON

February, March, May, July, December

Ever since seeing the title card for the "Harley's Holiday" episode from Batman: The Animated Series, where Bruce Timm drew Harley Quinn in a Harley-fied 5th Ave power suit taking the "babies" for a stroll, Laura was determined she would create her own red/black/diamonded Harley Quinn wardrobe. Laura is a native of San Francisco, CA who has cosplayed ol' Harl up and down the coast of California, and Seattle, Washington, for years at comic conventions. Laura has also enjoyed sharing/displaying her Harl costumery online via Facebook with other Harley Quinn and Batman-related cosplayers.

Laura is an artist as well, and she displays some of her original Harley/Joker comic art and panels for fellow comic enthusiasts to enjoy at her website www.madloveingotham.com. Though Laura is saying "Adieu" to the west coast and moving to Washington, DC (she loves DC comics and can't help but giggle at the irony of that!), she plans to still carve out time to draw more Harley/Joker fan art and create Harley/Joker-related goods—some of which will be available for purchase in the future on etsy and ebay.

DESIREE PRESTON

April, September

Desiree is a weirdo with anger issues. She loves literature, movies, nature, and video games. She's a freak for anything Batman. Absolutely loves it. She cosplays Harley Quinn (and a few other things, but mainly Harley). She'll school you with her knowledge of Harley and the Joker! Been a fan since BEFORE The Dark Knight, which seems rare these days. She love movies a lot more than the average person does, or probably should.

CASON PILLIOD

Designer

Cason rediscovered his love of Batman and all things Gotham when Batman: The Animated Series premiered in 1992. This merged with his love of toys to create an impressive collection of Batman toys. Sadly, though, the manufacturers could never quite produce an accurate character, and many characters were outright ignored (especially the ladies). So Cason took matters into his own hands and started crafting his own figures. (Really, he'd done so since childhood. But now he did so with purpose.)

The internet came into being, and Cason began communicating with other customizers around the globe. He has built a reputation for accuracy and quality, and is always eager to help other customizers solve problems or get started with the art. His website Inanimate Objects (pilliod.net) continues to maintain the standard for customs in the Timm style.
